PROSECUTOR SEES EXPERTS WHO SAY WOMAN WAS SLAIN

No Trace Of Gas In the Vital Organs of Mrs. Sheatsley

VICTIM DEAD BEFORE BURNING

Minister and Children Go To Paris, Ohio, Return Monday

(Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 22.—County prosecutor, John R. King was in a closed conference here today with experts who examined the vital organs of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, wife of the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, whose body was found in the furnace of the Sheatsley home, and city detectives, who have been aiding in the investigation of the case.

King hoped, he said, to be able to announce a definite line of procedure after the conference, to follow in his efforts to prove that the woman did not commit suicide.

Some significance was attached to the fact that Dr. R. C. Tarbell, an alienist, was called into the conference. It was the first time an alienist had been consulted by the investigating officials, so far as is known.

Mr. King would not intimate what led him to call Dr. Tarbell.

Conferring with King was C. F. Long, chemist, who reported yesterday that after an examination of the lungs of the woman, he was convinced that her dead body was put into the heating plant.

There was no trace found in the lungs, Mr. Long said, of carbon monoxide gas, ashes or soot, which would have been the case had she deliberately crawled into the furnace.

Dr. H. M. Brundage, a pathologist, who is to make a thorough examination of the lobes of the lungs, a piece of the thorax and liquid from the thorax, according to Long, has substantiated his findings after a hasty investigation. Dr. Brundage also attended the conference.

The investigation now centered here although the Sheatsley children and their father are in Paris, O., where Mrs. Sheatsley was buried. They are expected to return here Monday or Tuesday.

PRAISED BY PASTORS

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Chicago ministers had only high praise for the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, pastor of the Christ church in Bexley, O., who, with his sons, was questioned in connection with the death of his wife.

"A wonderful man and a splendid minister," said Dr. J. F. Siebert, general secretary of home missions and church extension work of the United Lutheran church.

A number of ministers here attended a dinner given in honor of the Rev. Sheatsley, when he passed through Chicago sometime ago.

Stocks Withstand Raids From Bears

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Stocks today withstood a severe test imposed by combined profit taking and bear selling, scoring an impressive recovery in a last minute rally which cancelled earlier losses and sent a number of railroad issues to new high levels.

Trading, which has been maintained at a terrific pace since the election moderated slightly today although total sales in the two hours of trading ran close to 1,000,000 shares.

GORE NAMED

Three of the fairest passengers saved were Maria Victoria and Carmen Van Arken, of Bogota, Colombia.

MISSIONARY WRITES INTERESTING LETTER

Miss Carrie Teague, In Japan, Tells Of the Conditions There

Mrs. J. Wiley Owen who lives on Prospect Drive, is in receipt of a letter from Miss Carrie Teague, a Morgan county girl, who is now in Japan, a missionary for the Methodist church. Miss Teague stated that she found the Japanese very friendly upon her recent return to that country after spending some time in America on furlough. She says the following relative to the Japanese exclusion act: "Of course the nation feels the exclusion act and it is resented but the people are not holding it against individuals."

As Miss Teague neared her mission destination, a large company of Japanese sang to her and her company in their native tongue: "He leadeth me, Oh, blessed thought."

The old porter, who years ago took care of the mission when Miss Teague was first in Japan, seized her baggage and would not let anyone else carry it.

Saw Scenes of Earthquake

Miss Teague thus described how Yokohama appeared to her after it was ruined by the great earthquake: "I shall never forget that afternoon, when our ship flying Old Glory, steered into the harbor. I began looking for old land marks—for the familiar buildings. I looked for the tower of the Bible school which I had left in 1923, but it was all in vain. At last the fact dawned me that the Yokohama which I had left was a city of the past. The low barracks-like buildings and the vacant lots were telling me the story of the awful earthquake. It was far more forceful than anything I had read in the newspaper reports. It made me sick at heart."

Japanese officials trust missionaries "I was in the customs house and in fear and trembling opened my steamer trunk. The inspector stopped and looked at me. Then he said in Japanese, 'Where are you going? Have you been there before?' What is your work? I told him in Japanese, that I came out for the first time 12 years ago and that I was a missionary. Then he smiled and said, 'You do not need to open your baggage. I will pass you free of any duty.'

"Don't you see how completely they trust us?"

Miss Teague has relatives living in the Twin Cities and throughout Morgan county. Her former home was at Falkville. She has spoken in local churches a number of times.

Lonnie Watkins Coffee, aged 52 years, died early Saturday morning at his home, 300 Tuscaloosa avenue, Birmingham. He is survived by his wife and 13-year-old daughter, his mother, Mrs. M. L. The death of Mr. Coffee came today as a great shock to his many friends.

He came here last Sunday from his Birmingham home to attend the funeral of his life long friend, the late J. H. Calvin. He became ill Sunday evening and was confined to his room at a local hotel until Wednesday, when he had sufficiently recovered to return to his home in Birmingham, where he suffered a relapse.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made, awaiting the arrival of his mother from Athens. The interment probably will be in Athens Sunday afternoon.

KILLING OF STACK AROUSES ENGLAND

Government Expected To Take Firm Action In Egypt Now

(Associated Press)

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The British public is expecting and a majority of the London press is demanding that the government take firm action toward Egypt in connection with the assassination, in Cairo, of Major General Lee Oliver Stack, governor general of the Sudan and sirdar of the Egyptian army.

VALLETA, Malta, Nov. 22.—The first battalion of the East Lancashire regiment has been suddenly ordered to Egypt and will sail next Wednesday.

A strike has been called in the Cairo schools as a protest against the British comment on the slaying of the Sirdar, the special dispatch also states. While no incident occurred in Cairo during the funeral of the sirdar, today advices from Alexandria, the message adds, report a hostile demonstration outside St. Marks cathedral, during memorial services for the murdered official, a number of men shaking their fists and shouting "Down with the British" and other violent expressions.

CAIRO, Nov. 22.—A British note handed to Caglou Pasha, the Egyptian premier, today demanded a "proper apology" in connection with the killing of Major General Sir Lee Stack, the sirdar and an indemnity of 500,000 pounds.

The note demands the prohibition of political demonstrations and withdrawal of Egyptian officers and units from the Sudan, the Sudanish troops to come under the control of the Sudan government proper.

2 COUNCILS PLAN TO COOPERATE ON SEWER PROJECT

Boswell Outlines the Idea To Albany Aldermen

SEEK RELIEF FOR FLOODED AREA

City Engineer Bingham To Submit Estimate Of Total Cost

The matter of taking care of the drainage of the surface water at Lee street and Second avenue was presented at the Albany city council meeting last night by W. F. Boswell, a member of the Decatur council. The council acted upon the question, and it was proposed that the Decatur and the Albany councils each bear one-half the expense of a storm sewer. In connection with the proposal, city engineer, M. S. Bingham, will submit a cost estimate of the work in the near future.

A new dog ordinance was proposed, but was not considered, and the old ordinance still holds, which requires a tax of one dollar per year for dogs within the city limits.

The inspection of meats was considered, but it was found that the state laws took care of that, and the county health officer was asked to look after it.

City engineers were asked to look after the drainage on Fourth street between Fifth and Eighth avenues, in South Albany, where a storm sewer is said to be required, and to submit a cost estimate of the work required.

The public property committee recommended that new rooms be fitted up over the city hall for Fireman B. W. Jones and his family.

The city proposes to purchase a valuable map of Allen Wallace, of Anniston, formerly an engineer here. The map is valued at $350. It shows the streets, sewer lines, water mains, etc.

A proposition was brought up for the paving of Ninth avenue, west, but it was decided that the cost would be greater than the property abutting the street would bear.

The resignation of J. W. Petty as assistant clerk was accepted, and Elkins R. Collier was elected in his place. W. B. Newlin was elected in the place of Fireman Ed Clark, who resigned. M. S. Bingham was elected city engineer.

The board will meet with the board of education on Tuesday, December 2, to confer on questions pertaining to schools.

GIRL JUMPS FROM SENATE WINDOW

Refuses to Disclose Her Name At Hospital; Man Arrested

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Early morning passersby at the senate office building saw a young woman come hurtling through a window and plunge 15 feet to the stone pavement below. She suffered a compound fracture of the leg and was taken to a hospital where she refused to give her name.

Those who witnessed the plunge said a man's face appeared at the window and the young woman, when picked up, exclaimed:

"O why did he make me jump?"

Police are holding for investigation a man said to have been an employee in the office of a senator. The man later was identified as John C. Dugan, an employee in the building.

The young woman jumped from the window of the office of Senator Lenroot, of Wisconsin. The senator is not in the city. Dugan was released on nominal bail.

The store's headquarters will be Nebrigg's old stand on Second avenue. Committees have been engaged for several days in collecting contributions from business men and manufacturers for sale in the store and the general committee in charge of the store promises "some rare bargains."

Florida Man Held In Fatal Shooting

(Associated Press)

ORLANDO, Fla., Nov. 22.—N. D. Broward, nephew of former Governor Broward and son of Malcolm Broward, of Jacksonville, was shot and killed shortly after 1 o'clock this morning in the home of Hal K. Cady. Cady was placed under arrest.

According to the police three shots were fired, one striking Mrs. Cady on the cheek. Sheriff Karel refused to let anyone see Cady until after the inquest which is scheduled for this afternoon.

Sheriff Karel said, however, that Cady was in no condition to talk and seemed in a daze.

"He did not know that he had shot his wife until I told him of it," said the sheriff, "nor did he seem to know that he had shot Broward. He seemed to think Broward killed himself when he stepped on a rug. Cady said that they were scuffling and showed me a place on his chest somewhat bruised and said Broward had bitten him there," Sheriff Karel continued.

Broward formerly lived in Jacksonville, but has been living here with his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Giles. It is said his wife is living in Jacksonville. They have two children.

BIRMINGHAM MAN SPEAKS ON DETAIL WORK FOR CHURCH

Harry Denman is Heard At Methodist Men's Club Meeting

BANQUET SERVED AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Musical Program Very Much Enjoyed By Large Crowd

Declaring that if churches enlarge as they should, and reach the people as they should, that ideas must be originated and plans must be made continually by church leaders, in his address to the Methodist Men's Club of the Central Methodist church, at the Y. M. C. A. last night, Harry Denman, of Birmingham, who was introduced by Dr. J. D. Hunter, as "the general manager of the First Methodist church of Birmingham," advocated divided responsibility in church work so as to relieve pastors of large amounts of detail work.

In connection with his argument for the establishment of real business methods in churches, Mr. Denman related how E. H. Harriman said he always wanted to see his railroad executives doing nothing but thinking for the betterment of the service of the Harriman R. R. lines.

"Every constructive, progressive idea has to originate in the mind of some individual," Mr. Denman said, "and we must arrange to give our pastors and church executives plenty of opportunities to think and plan."

The speaker said that it was utterly folly to pay ministers the salaries due them, to keep accounts and matters of that kind when they were looked to for intellectual and spiritual leadership.

Mr. Denman enumerated the following things a Methodist minister is expected to do by an ordinary Methodist congregation: Preach two sermons weekly, hold the prayer meetings, run the Sunday school, run young people's societies, provide recreation and society for his church, conduct devotions for the Woman's Missionary societies, visit the sick, conduct funerals, take care of the poor, take leading parts in civic and fraternal societies, do general visiting, see prospective members, edit the church bulletin, care for church property, raise the finances of the church, look after the church music, collect centenary pledges, be agent for the Alabama Christian Advocate, see that the superannuate fund is raised, organize "golden cross societies," support the orphanage, look after stewardship and tithing, keep the evangelistic spirit aroused, write church letters, keep records of the number of members, do church extension work, organize men's clubs, attend all church meetings and church socials, furnish new ideas, read, and finally "administer soothing syrup."

The speaker explained that the last named activity was to soothe the selfish members who were not chairmen of all the committees, etc.

The speaker declared the most heart breaking part of church activities was seeking to soothe the feelings of the selfish "show-off" members.

An Overflow Attendance Present

The membership and guests of the club, completely filled the east room of the association, and many additional chairs had to be secured to those at first provided.

Promptly at the appointed hour, C. W. Mathews, president of the club and the toastmaster, called the assembly to order and after devotional exercises and one stanza of a patriotic hymn, the Vaughn Quartette was introduced, its members singing themselves into the hearts of the company and creating much enthusiasm, especially when the encore numbers were sung. Their final number was the quartette's version of "It ain't Going to Rain No More."

SPORTS

Vandy-Minnesota Game Intersectional Event; Western Title Depends Upon Chi

One of the most picturesque and interesting intersectional games is being played this afternoon up in Minnesota where the Vanderbilt Commodores tackle the Gophers of Minnesota. Should Vanderbilt come through with a victory, which isn't impossible but highly improbable, a blaze of southern glory will illumine both the east and west. It is not to be forgotten that the Minnesota team is the one team that has stopped Grange of Illinois. Grange slipped through the Gopher defense for only one touchdown while he had been used to sliding down the field for pointers at least four or five times against every other team that the Illini met.

California and Stanford play an annual engagement at Berkeley with the odds against Stanford, but Glenn Warner is one of the coaches who does not bow to the record of Andy Smith of California. Stanford may pull through, although the best that they hope for is a tie game. Many other of the big games will furnish amusement for the eastern and western crowds. Yale plays Harvard at New Haven, Syracuse battles Colgate, Lehigh and Lafayette battle at Bethlehem and the game is not the walkover that it has been for Lafayette in past years. Bucknell will make Rutgers step at Philadelphia. Illinois plays Ohio State at Urbana.

Chicago held the Illini to a 21-21 tie some weeks ago and by virtue of that fact they go into the Wisconsin battle today with the western title hanging fire. Should Wisconsin withstand the Chicago pounding then the title will be in a very confusing light and the Illini will possibly be in line to claim the title. Since 1918 the Maroons have been held from the title by a tie or by one defeat so the Wisconsin game means a great deal to the Chicago coaches and players.

In the southland many teams are passing this week in preparation for the annual Thanksgiving tilts some of which will settle the southern honor for the year. The three leading contenders for the title are not playing.

The Ostrich.

The Ostrich is that foolish bird,
Whose story you have often heard;
When danger comes he hides his head,
And thinks he's out of sight, 'tis said.

Some persons have this self-same trait,
And consequently tempt sad fate—
"Why more insurance" is their cry,
"My health is good, I shall never die."

We have recently read of a bank clerk who confessed to starting 100 fires. Now that fellow had the wrong job. He should have been a janitor and worked during the winter months.

We don't know what nature had in mind when she invented ragweed, but we do know that she produced a very prolific article, one that has been a great agricultural problem for all time.

An expert tells us that Niagara Falls is 25,000 years old. Don't stop there old top, if you are a fair mathematician, let us know how much power has gone to waste.

Be careful. Always live so that it may never become necessary for lawyers to prove to a jury of twelve men that you have been feeble minded since the days of your tender youth.

Statisticians now say that one dollar is worth only 69 cents. The difference between 69 cents and 100 cents must, we presume, be taken out in stump speeches.

Twenty-five years ago newspapers devoted considerable space to the plan of collecting mail by auto in the United States. That's not so long ago. Today we have transcontinental air mail delivery. It is no stretch of the imagination to say that in the next quarter of a century ways of living will be turned upside down and most of our scientific marvels will have become old fashioned.

OUR HIGHWAYS

To realize fully the great and permanent improvement in rural conditions over Morgan County, one only has to take a retrospective view, comparing the conditions now and then.

In the general improvement noted, no department of endeavor embraced in the department of public utilities, looms larger than the public roads of this county, including the federal aid road known as the Bee Line highway, traversing the entire length of the county from North to South.

Just a short time comparatively, there were no public roads to speak of in the county, worthy the name. What did exist were the poorest constructed dirt roads, upon which very little upkeep was expended and when winter rains set in travel was well nigh an impossibility. The working of roads was confined to throwing dirt over cedar or pine tops to fill up the ruts, and so long as the rain stayed off, travel could be done.

Real muddy places were cause wayed. That is, to lay poles of equal length across the roadway, and fill in with dirt. Those who have ever had occasion to travel this class of road have a lasting memory of it.

The advocates of good roads have had to fight every inch of the way, bearing the adverse criticism directed at them, and have bravely met the issue, doing that which in their judgment was the best for all the people.

Then came the bond issue. With no experience in building and maintaining hard surface roads, their construction was begun. That mistakes were made, no one will deny. But, from the inception of these hard surface roads, the beginning of what will ultimately be a perfect system of good roads penetrating every nook and corner of this populous county will be the result.

Hand in hand with good road construction has been a great and noticeable improvement in rural education. It has long been an axiom, that these two important improvements could always be counted on to go along together. That it is a fact, observant ones will freely admit. Go in any direction one chooses, there can be found nice, comfortable school houses, with inviting surroundings, to which the future citizens of this country can go with some degree of comfort, and at any season of the year, and in any kind of weather conditions. Contrast this condition with the three months school of the past, their attendance then often being impossible on account of mud or swollen streams.

Good roads has made possible the consolidated school, with largely increased attendance, better teachers and better facilities for teaching. That these things have raised the standards of living, is quite apparent.

If the young will but use the splendid helps and conveniences put there for them by those who have been looking forward, there will be a better prepared citizenship, ready when their time comes to take up the duties and responsibilities of life, and rear a superstructure on the foundation of the present, greater and grander in every way than those who preceded them could build. The responsibility is with them; how well they will meet the issue remains to be seen.

THE WORLD WISHES THE WAR AGAINST OPIUM TO CONTINUE

Those interested in the restriction of the use of opium, will await with much interest the final outcome of the plans of those in the league of nations to prohibit traffic in opium. Just at present Japan has refused to co-operate with the anti-opium nations, but she may later. The Japs have charged that the honor of their country has been insulted by certain statesmen, who have exposed opium scandals among high officials of Japan. For many years nations have been seeking to lessen the opium evil by numerous restrictions and requirements. In 1909 twelve leading nations had representatives in Shanghai, China when a resolution was passed to the effect that it was the duty of stop the exportation of opium to countries which forbade its importation. But because opium is the vice and stimulant of so many, the trade in it is very profitable, and hence it has always been very difficult to enforce the anti-opium laws. The league of nations has a standing committee to look after the opium trade, and many meetings have been held of that committee, prior to the present meeting at Geneva. In 1923, Americans took a leading part in the promulgation of the following and similar anti-opium regulations:

"The limitation of the amounts of morphine, heroin or cocaine and their salts to be manufactured; the limitation of the amounts of raw opium and coca leaf to be imported for that purpose and for other medicinal and scientific purposes; and the limitation of the production of raw opium and coca leaf for export."

The world at large will hope that instead of abandoning the fight on opium, that the nations will renew it with increased vigor.

A TRAIN OF THOUGHTS

For the Sabbath and Other Days

By J. E. Blair

Christianity's brightest revelation "The Transfiguration," is the theme of tomorrow's Sunday School lesson. As Christ's radiant presence on that occasion awoke Peter, James and John; today, His presence should arouse, transfigure and transform every one of us.

Lesson No. 1 from the "Transfiguration," Moses, Elias and Christ should be seen for their examples. The sight of Moses, should inspire us to keep those ten commandments, God gave, through him. Great Elias, should inspire all to do some constructive task, just as that greatest of the old Testament prophets routed the false prophets of Baal on Mt. Carmel. And the sight of the Savior on the mount of transfiguration, should inspire all to be like Him in every respect.

We should desire to wear the white robes of righteousness, after imagining the wonderful scene on the mountain; and we should pray for our faces to shine with divine triumph, as did those of Moses, Elias and the Christ. On the assumption just as Peter, James and John were aroused from slumber, by the transfiguration, that we also are awake from our death-like sleep, to where we feel divine triumph. Secondly, let us consider the subject of the conversation of Christ, Moses and Elias. "And (they) spake of His decease that He should accomplish at Jerusalem." St. Luke, 9:31.

It is said by good men, let us hope in error, that "best" pulpits now days, avoid speaking of the significance of Christ's death, but that like Peter of old, "big" preachers are saying, in effect "Be it (death) far from Thee, Lord; this shall not be unto Thee," forgetting the atonement wrought by Christ's crucifixion.

If there be such, go mark them well for them no sons and daughters are being born into the kingdom, and they need to be told what the Savior told Peter, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

Lesson No. 3, from the transfiguration, "A cloud received Moses and Elias, and Jesus only remained. Indeed, He alone remains for us. What He says, and what He did, as expressing the relationships that shall exist between men and men, is what we must settle by. "Hear Him," God's voice said as the transfiguration scene closed. Truly, as Dr. O'Rear said last Sunday evening, as we obey, admire and have faith in Christ, so God judges, as to whether or not we are Christians.

Lesson No. 4; Christ led down from the mount of transfiguration, into the every day duties of life. He put service in connection with the mountain top experience. Peter, wrong as usual, wanted to build tabernacles on the mountain, as if to stay there, it was such a "good" place. He evidently wanted to be "at ease in Zion," but he did show his obedience to the Master, by coming with Him and in helping get the world out of the mud and filth of sin. And great Peter was faithful unto death when great testing times came after Christ had ascended into glory. Peter's mistakes were only of judgment. Happy are we, if no worse may be said of us.

Regulations Given For Tax Inspection

The following regulations have been made public by W. E. Snead, collector of internal revenue at Birmingham, for the inspection of income tax assessments:

Experience has demonstrated that there are many who desire to see the lists for no obvious reason. It is therefore necessary that careful supervision of the publicity section of the revenue act be made in order that the work of posting payments to the lists, preparing bills, notices and demands for tax may not be delayed. It is essential that the December bills be prepared and ready for mailing on December 1st, and that all demand notices for delinquent taxpayers be mailed promptly. Therefore until further notice, the assessment list of income tax returns filed in this office since January 1st, 1924, will be open for public inspection on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays of each week from 8:30 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. During the period it can be inspected it will be under the personal and direct supervision of Mr. A. W. Haley, whose duty it will be to see that it is not mutilated or changed in any way, and no information on the list other than that permitted by Section 257 (b) is given out.

W. E. SNEAD, Collector.

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

First: The church going habit is clean, productive of great gain in those things that count for most in ones life. It is a good habit.
Second: At church no one receives suggestions to gamble, to be unclean, to be untrue to family, to drink, to kill, to violate law.
Third: The church stands for righteousness, which means justice for all. You miss much if not identified with the program of the church.
Fourth: We are reminded at church, of our duty, our responsibility, our sin. But at church we are shown who can forgive our sin, who can enable us to discharge our duty; who can lead us into paths of peace for His names sake.
Fifth: At church, you come into contact with the spiritual. Man is physical, Man is spiritual, the spiritual is the permanent part of man.
Sixth: At church our eyes are trained so we can see God and know Him. They miss much who fail to walk together to the Kirk, and all together pray, while each to his great, father bends, old men and babes and loving friends, and youths and maidens gay."—By Dr. Claude Orear, Pastor of the First Methodist Church of Decatur.

Birmingham Man Speaks On Detail Work For Church

which was an entirely new one and proved to be a delightful one. Mr. Matthews had each diner and guest give his name and vocation, then Dr. J. S. Robertson, the newly appointed presiding elder of the Decatur district, was called on, as the request of Dr. Hunter. Dr. Robertson praised the place of dining as "where men feed together, they begin to feel alike, think together and act together."

Mrs. McGlathery Wins All Hearts. Mrs. R. M. McGlathery, with Mrs. H. O. Trapp, as her accompanist, won all hearts following the speech of Dr. Robertson, when she sang "My First Love," "You Had Better Ask Me," and a third song, which was an encore. Mrs. McGlathery also age just as the assembly arose from the banquet table by special request, preceding the benediction by Dr. Robertson.

Denman Principal Speaker

It was following the first appearance of Mrs. McGlathery that Dr. Hunter, at the request of the toastmaster, introduced Mr. Denman, was the guest of honor of the club and the speaker of the evening. In addition to advocating strict business methods in church work, and "divided responsibilities" the speaker laid great stress upon the importance of Sunday School work. He frankly told the company that their day was passing, that they did things from habit and force of circumstance to a large extent, but that the children were the really potential individuals—that they carried destiny in their little hands, and that as their hearts beat, so would the world of the future become. It was shown to be not only wrong, but bad economy, for men to refuse to teach Sunday school when they could save lives; and the taxes that would be used perforce to maintain jails and reform schools. The speaker severely criticized the mismanagement of churches, saying that "people seemed to put little ingenuity into their church activities. Women who would not teach children but who were quick to aid in 'rescue work for the pleasant publicity of it' were criticized. It was declared that 85 per cent of all church members come through the Sunday Schools.

"If you would make the most of your life," the speaker said forcefully, "then put it in a child. Temperance-taught children voted whiskey out; and children taught to obey the law, will see that the laws are observed when they are grown. If you cannot teach, put your money

Marsak, however, seemed but indifferently interested; his eyes continued awhile to stray toward the palmetto balm by the mainmast. At length, without another word to Sak-el-Bahr, he made his way about, and flung himself down under the awning, beside his father. Asad sat there in a moody abstraction, already regretting that he should have lent an ear to Fendish to the extent of coming upon this voyage, and assured by now that at least there was no cause to mistrust Sak-el-Bahr. Marsak came to revive that drooping mistrust. But the moment was ill-chosen, and at the first words he uttered on the subject he was growled into silence by his sire.

"Thou dost but voice thine own malice," Asad rebuked him. "And I am proven a fool in that I have permitted the malice of others to urge me in this matter. No more, I say."

Thereupon Marsak fell silent and sulking, his eyes ever following Sak-el-Bahr, who had descended the three steps from the poop to the gangway and was pacing slowly down between the rows' benches. The corsair was supremely ill at ease, as a man must be who has something to conceal, and who begins to fear that he may have been betrayed. Yet who was there could have betrayed him? But three men aboard that vessel knew his secret—Ah, his lieutenant, Jasper, and the Italian Vigittello. And Sak-el-Bahr would have staked all his possessions that neither Ah nor Vigittello would have betrayed him, whilst he was fairly confident that in his own interests Jasper also must have kept faith. Yet Marsak's allusion to that palmetto balm had filled him with an uneasiness that sent him now in quest of his Italian boat-swain whom he trusted above all others.

"Vigittello," said he, "is it possible that I have been betrayed to the Basha?" Vigittello looked up sharply at the question, then smiled with confidence. They were standing alone by the bulwarks on the waist-deck. "Touching what we carry yonder?" quoth he, his glance shifting to the bale. "Impossible. If Asad had knowledge he would have betrayed it before we left Algiers, or else he would never have sailed without a stouter bodyguard of his own."

"What need of bodyguard for him?" returned Sak-el-Bahr. "If it should come to grips between us—as well it may if what I suspect be true—there is no doubt as to the side upon which the corsairs would range themselves."

"Is there not?" quoth Vigittello, a smile upon his swarthy face. "Be not so sure. These men have most

On that they parted, Vigittello to make his way to the prow and there engage in his investigations, Sak-el-Bahr slowly to retrace his steps to the poop. But at the first bench about the gangway he paused, and looked down at the dejected, white-fleshed slave who sat shackled there. He smiled cruelly, his own anxieties forgotten in the favor of vengeance.

"So you have tasted the whip already," he said in English. "But that is nothing to what is yet to come. You are in luck that there is a wind today. It will not always be so. Soon shall you learn what it was that I endured by your contriving."

Lionel looked up at him with haggard, blood-injected eyes. He wanted to curse his brother, yet was he too overwhelmed by the sense of the fitness of this punishment.

"For myself I care nothing," he replied. "But you will, sweet brother, was the answer. 'You will care for yourself most damnably and pity yourself most poignantly. I speak from experience. 'Tis odds you will not live, and that is my chief regret—I would you had my thews to keep you alive in this floating hell.'"

"I tell you I care nothing for myself," Lionel insisted. "What have you done with Rosamund?" "Will it surprise you to learn that I have played the gentleman and married her?" Oliver mocked him.

"Married her?" his brother gasped, blanching at the very thought. "You bound!"

"Why abuse me? Could I have done more?" And with a laugh he sauntered on, leaving Lionel to writhe there with the torment of his half-knowledge.

An hour later, when the cloudy outline of the Balearic Isles had acquired density and color, Sak-el-Bahr and Vigittello met again on the waist-deck, and they exchanged some few words in passing.

"It is difficult to say exactly," the boatswain murmured, "but from what I gather I think the odds would be very evenly balanced, and it were rash in thee to precipitate a quarrel."

"I am not like to do so," replied Sak-el-Bahr. "I should not be like to do so in any case. I but desired to know how I stand in case a quarrel should be forced upon me." And he passed on.

Yet his uneasiness was no whit allayed; his difficulties were very far from solved. He had undertaken to carry Rosamund to France or Italy; he had pledged her his word to land her upon one or the other shore, and should he fail, she might even come to conclude that such had never been his real intention. Yet how was he to succeed now, since Asad was aboard the galleon? Must he be constrained to carry her back to Algiers as secretly as he had brought her thence, and to keep her there until another opportunity of setting her ashore upon a Christian country should present itself? That was clearly impracticable and fraught with too much risk of detection. Indeed, the risk of detection was very imminent now. At any moment her presence in that panther might be betrayed. He could think of no way in which to redeem his pledged word. He could but wait and hope, trusting to his luck and to some opportunity which it was impossible to foresee.

And so he paced on alone and very lonely, waiting and praying for a miracle.

CHAPTER XXIV THE PANNIER

He was still pacing there when an hour or so before sunset—some fifteen hours after setting out—they stood before the entrance of a long bottle-necked cove under the shadow of the cliffs of Agulla Point on the southern coast of the island of Formentera. He was rendered aware of this and roused from his abstraction by the voice of Asad calling to him from the poop and commanding him to make the cove.

Already the wind was falling them, and it became necessary to take to the oars, as must in any case have happened once they were through the cove's narrow neck in the becalmed lagoon beyond. So Sak-el-Bahr, in his turn, raised up his voice, and in answer to his shout came Vigittello and Larocque.

A blast of Vigittello's whistle brought his own men to head, and they passed rapidly along the benches, ordering the rowers to make ready, whilst Jasper and a half-dozen Moslem sailors were about furling the sails that already were beginning to flap in the falling and intermittent gusts of the expiring wind. Sak-el-Bahr gave the word to row, and Vigittello gave a second and longer blast. The oars dipped, the slaves strained, and the galleon plowed forward, time being kept by a boatswain's mate who squatted on the waist-deck and beat a tautum rhythmically.

"Marsak fell silent and sulking, his eyes ever following Sak-el-Bahr."

of them followed thee into a score of fights. To them thou art the Basha, their natural leader."

"Maybe. But their allegiance belongs to Asad-ed-Din, the exalted of Allah. Did it come to a choice between us their faith would urge them to stand beside him in spite of any past bonds that may have existed between them and me."

"Yet there were some who murmured when thou wert superseded in the command of this expedition," Vigittello informed him, "I doubt not that many would be influenced by their faith, but many would stand by thee against the Grand Sultan himself. 'And do not forget,' he added, instinctively lowering his voice, 'that many of us are renegades like myself and thee, who would never know a moment's doubt if it came to a choice of sides. But I hope,' he ended in another tone, 'there is no such danger here.'"

"And so do I, in all faith," replied Sak-el-Bahr with fervor. "Yet I am uneasy, and I must know where I stand if the worst takes place. Go thou amongst the men, Vigittello, and probe their real feelings, gauge their humor and endeavor to ascertain upon what numbers I may count if I have to declare war upon Asad or if he declares it upon me. Be cautious."

Vigittello closed one of his black eyes portentously.

"Depend upon it," he said, "I'll bring you word anon."
